Raising Awareness...

What is Art?

If you ask 100 people "what is art?" there's a good chance you will get 100 different answers. The opportunity to explore this question came to life this fall in an exciting collaboration with Forward Theater Company in Madison.

Forward Theater's presentation of John Logan's Tony award-winning play Red, depicts the life of abstract expressionist painter Mark Rothko. The story challenges perceptions and raises awareness about art and the creative process. Sound familiar? That's exactly what VSA Wisconsin does.

This collaboration with Forward Theater inspired us to think outside the box. We challenged the teaching artists at the art center to use the theme What Is Art? in their classes. Excitedly, they implemented new ideas for individual and collaborative art making that hadn't been tried before. One teaching artist projected images of work by famous artists. After viewing a Kandinsky, one participant, who had previously only drawn cats, drew something entirely different, and with complementary colors. Another participant, who has a very short attention span, finished an entire project and proudly pointed out shapes in his storybooks -- a new accomplishment for him. In a music and movement class, participants viewed a video of a flash mob dancing in an airport which inspired them to learn the art of swing dancing. Participants in a ceramics class created self portrait masks and animals, exploring art within themselves and through nature.

Original visual artworks created in the classes along with pictorial images of music and movement classes are now on view at the VSA Wisconsin gallery through April 10. Hours are Monday-Thursday 9 am-3 pm or by appointment. Please join us in exploring creative expression and the relationship between art and viewer.

Successes and Smiles...

Art Center

“When given choices on various activities, participants usually wanted to play the drums; they were very open to structure and trying new exercises. We had a great final class where we told a story with the music; I didn’t impose any story on them, they discovered it on their own and contributed ideas on what sounds we could use to tell a story about reindeer on vacation. After exploring various music dynamics and listening exercises, we also had some wonderful improvisational music sessions!”

~Fiona Stoner, teaching artist

“Thank you so much...for providing such wonderful classes for all our special people. Pam was so unhappy when her “Painting Galore” class was done. She keeps underlining the dates in her calendar for her new classes to start. It adds so much to her life.” ~ Sandi Grote

Visual art is a very important part of Casey’s DeZonia’s life. He likes expressing his creativity by building pottery, 3-D projects, and oil pastel drawings. His favorite subjects are drawn from cartoons, comics, animals, science, and nature. Sometimes his work encompasses ideas such as womens’ rights in America. At VSA Wisconsin he can make creations that he cannot do at home. Casey’s father, Barry, says “I am very grateful for the opportunities that Casey has had to explore his interests and share them with people. I see the pride Casey takes in the recognition of his talents by others. And I know that this would not have happened without VSA.”

Early Childhood Residencies

Many Early Childhood residencies focused on opportunities for language development. Music activities included singing, props, animal instruments, parachute, rhymes, and movement. New instruments such as woodblocks, rainsticks, frog guiros, scrapers, thunder tubes, duck guiros, and sandblocks were used to increase enthusiasm and allow for a sense of accomplishment mastering a new skill. Some activities were tied to curriculum topics, furthering experiences in another area. Movement activities allowed experiences with wands and scarves. They also incorporated stop-start elements giving practice in impulse control and motor planning.

One very shy child in a creative drama residency initially would not speak and only responded to yes and no questions by shaking his head. He showed great interest when the teaching artist arrived and by the third session he began to actively participate in the activities. Soon he began to utter single words and now he answers questions when they are asked of the group. The student is starting to open up during the school day and the teacher says she is sure that it is in direct correlation with his positive experience during the residency.

Choirs

Almost 200 people with disabilities participate in the state-wide choir program. Choir members learn about pitch, tone, rhythm, movement, basic music history and composition and share their accomplishments through public performances.

Each semester the Madison choir learns one new song that is particularly complex and challenges the group to expand their abilities. Last winter they mastered “Carol of the Bells,” a three-part round, as well as “Zum Gali Gali” and the “Banana Boat Song.” Members of the Stoughton choir are using rhythm instruments as they sing and also are given a chance to lead songs with the director. In addition to new musical accomplishments, choir members are also demonstrating increased self confidence and social skills. Hazel* was previously quite withdrawn, but now interacts with others more, giving “high 5’s,” and coming up to the front to perform in a group. Sissy* is very helpful in passing out instruments without being asked, as well as helping to put them away. She is also a leader with the drums and other instruments.

Call for Art

According to Barb Drews, art teacher at West High School, Madison, the Call for Art program is an authentic and valuable experience for students. Over the years, many of her students have received purchase awards or recognition awards resulting from this program and it has given them great validation as artists. Not only are the students gaining pride and self confidence in their art endeavors, some now consider art as a viable career opportunity. Many are continuing to keep art as a focal point in their lives. She says, "Regardless of the countless outcomes, the experience itself is priceless!"

More than 400 people visited the Call for Art Visual Expressions exhibition while it was on view in 2013. Many positive remarks were written in the exhibition comment book. One mother wrote: "What a pleasant surprise to see both of my boys' art work on display—so special for Mom since neither like fine motor activities!!"

Torin Wilke received a 2013 Purchase Award and his work entitled "Darkness" is now in the VSA traveling exhibition. Torin's mother says, "Our family is so excited for him. They can see how he loves his art. I think his art makes him very happy. Obviously there are a lot of things that he struggles doing because of his disability, but through his art, I think it opens up a lot of people's eyes. They see what he can do. He can do what everybody can do."

VSA Day

VSA Day is an annual performance opportunity for individuals with disabilities to showcase their musical accomplishments at a UW Badger football game. VSA Wisconsin choir members from Stevens Point and Wisconsin Rapids signed the National Anthem and students from Medford, DeForest, Belmont and Tomah performed with the UW Marching Band. Two students who attended have Autism and Down Syndrome. Both participate fully in the Tomah Marching Band program and one is also a member of the Concert Choir. Charlie O'Brien, director of instrumental music says "Their participation in the arts is one of the many examples of how immersion into the classroom benefits everyone involved. The arts are an important part of their lives and your event reinforces how music should be available to anyone and everyone regardless of ability level or special needs. Thank you again for the very special event and I hope we can participate for years to come. The only thing I would change would be to have even more students participate so they can share such a worthwhile experience. I look forward to working with you in the future and please share my sincerest thank you and praise with your organization, donors, and volunteers."

School & Community Artist Residencies

In Wisconsin Rapids, adults with disabilities participated in a puppetry residency at the Opportunity Development Center. They created rod, hand, and mouth puppets and learned how to manipulate them for a performance. Using the music of "Carnival of the Animals" as inspiration, participants performed with their puppets before an audience of 120. According to the teaching artist, one participant was initially reluctant to lift her arms. However, the desire to hold her puppet up and move it was strong and she was ultimately able to perform this task. The participant was also non-verbal during the residency workshops, but during the final performance, her cat puppet let out a most surprising 'meow!'

A residency at Mendota Elementary School in Madison directly impacted 340 students and resulted in a large mural. In his program application, art teacher Nate Kirley wrote, "Initially, I was intrigued by VSA's philosophy of universal design in relation to teaching art; making the project accessible to everyone and implementing best practices across the board. We had so much success with VSA last year we decided to work with them again." An inclusive learning setting like Mendota Elementary School provided an environment in which children of all abilities could grow and develop, particularly as they worked side-by-side to design and complete the mural.

"Art speaks when words fail, and certainly for VSA, people learn to express themselves and find value in their talents when other avenues fail them. Having other people value and appreciate their work grows their self-respect and self-confidence, which is a miracle to see. The human qualities of caring, compassion, and encouragement are so evident in VSA that it's heartwarming to witness. It should be an example to follow in other areas of our lives. VSA is a great place to start your investment in a more positive world!"

Educational art programs directly served 1,828 individuals, most with disabilities

Slightly more than 82% of annual expenses were devoted to programming

More than 285,549 people were impacted by exhibitions, concerts, and special performances by individual with disabilities

95 volunteers provided 615 hours of support for administration, programs and events

VSA Wisconsin partners with Edgewood College art therapy students and Milwaukee Area Technical College occupational therapy students to assist with selected VSA Wisconsin programming. These volunteers gain valuable experience working with people with disabilities, and bring a fresh perspective to the programs.

"Through your mentoring, Abby [art therapy student intern in the VSA Art Center in 2013] gained so much practical experience and insight in the benefits of art therapy with adults with a range of needs and abilities. She was inspired by the staff's role modeling and the excellent program you have created for VSA Wisconsin. Through your supervision, Abby's skills and confidence have flourished! The Edgewood College Art Therapy Program would not be able to provide the level of education that we desire without our community partners. We value our relationship with VSA Wisconsin."

VSA Choir of Appleton... Performs with Fox Valleyaires

On December 10, the VSA Choir of Appleton joined the Fox Valleyaires Men's Barbershop Chorus in a holiday concert in Perry Hall at UW Fox Valley, Menasha. The choir sang two songs midway through the concert and then joined the Fox Valleyaires for holiday favorites, "Oh Come All Ye Faithful," "Joy to the World" and "We Wish You a Merry Christmas" at the end of the program.

It was a very fun event for the choir members. In addition to singing on stage before a large audience, choir members got to spend time in the dressing room before the performance. When the final song ended, one choir member summed up the experience with a smile and said, "That was wonderful!" Choir director Tiffany Vollrath hopes to participate in more events like this in the future.

The choir rehearses weekly at First English Lutheran Church. Established in 1995, this ongoing program allows individuals with disabilities the opportunity to actively contribute to the social, cultural and economic life of the Fox Cities.
